BOOK WEEK IS COMING!

BOOK WEEK NOVEMBER 10 TO 16

Brings a message of Good Books and Good Friends

For twenty-two years, a week in November has been dedicated to books —to pointing up the importance of good reading habits for boys and girls and encouraging the love of books. BOOK WEEK will begin this year on Sunday, November 10 and continue through Saturday, November 16. During this period our librarians, teachers and others associated in work with children, parents or books will rally the community in observance of BOOK WEEK.

The growing national interest in education, welfare of youth and mobilization for democracy lends added significance to this observance. Books play an essential part in education, both in and out of school. They help to develop alert and intelligent citizens. They are "adventure, love, beauty, conscience, and the bright, shining coin of happiness." BOOK WEEK challenges us to inform ourselves of the book facilities in our community and to work with those who are trying to bring more books within the reach of our boys and girls.

Let BOOK WEEK give you a fresh start in you; reading: see the new books in library and bookstore. Plan to visit the school exhibits and see what is being done in classrooms to encourage good reading. Give your children the companionship of books in your home to help them grow into happy, well balanced men and women.

Know that You Look Your Best

Nothing will add more to your self assurance than immaculately cleaned and pressed apparel. You can be assured of good appearance by having your clothes cleaned frequently by a good cleaner.

Military Visitors See Endurance Test

Military experts from nine Latin-American republics, who are currently touring United States forts, army posts and defenses, are shown watching an army truck undergo a stiff test at the plant of the Dodge Motor company in Detroit, Mich. The tour of these military experts is part of the great Pan-American defense program now under way.

Ready-Made Marksmen for Draft Army

The army will not have to work very hard to make marksmen of these two boys, shown registering for selective military service in Phoenix, Ariz. The hunting season opened on registration day, so the boys went forth and bagged their deer before signing up. L. to R., Bob McComb, J. W. Wheeler, registrar Jack W. Eaton, Maj. R. W. Shaw and J. S. Stanley.

Boycott

Curiously enough, the word "boycott" comes from the name of a man. The individual who contributed this much-employed word to the English language was an unpopular Irish landlord named Charles Cunningham Boycott.

He was exceedingly harsh in his methods of collecting rents. In the autumn of 1880 his tenants clubbed together and demanded lower rents, but Boycott refused to heed them. They thereupon began to annoy Boycott in every manner possible. They would not work for him, nor would they permit any outsiders to do so. They ruined his fences, went so far as to insult him to his face, and even burned him in effigy.

Boycott was obliged to appeal to the government for protection. The government gave him the protection he so much needed, but the methods employed by Boycott's tenants were later used by the Irish Land League to force its enemies to comply with its demands. Thus the word "boycott" came into use as meaning a commercial taboo.

Natural Resources

Science has merely scratched the surface so far in utilizing natural sources, according to Watson Davis, director of Science Service. He suggests that the government lend part of its gold accumulation to be used in studying atomic breakdown. It is his belief that an investigation should be made in the utilization of natural resources, from commercial production of diamonds, to obtaining power from the breaking down of atoms.

By IRA MILLER

Farm Electrification Bureau

A SHORT time ago we discussed the many advantages and conveniences of running water, under pressure, in the farm home and buildings. We also pointed out that the ideal and most economical method of obtaining this electricity, where such service is available. However, it consists of an automatic electric pressure water system are only half realized if it does not at all times provide an ample supply of hot as well as cold water.

Electric tank heaters and water warmers are various types are ideal for providing warm drinking water for livestock and poultry. And for small quantities (two to ten gallons) of hot water for ordinary kitchen, dairy and toilet use, the non-pressure electric heater is cheap both in first and operating cost. But for practically unlimited hot water, an automatic electric storage heater is the thing to use.

Such heaters are regularly obtainable with capacities of from 10 to 160 gallons and, on special order, up to 1000 gallons. They are available in round, square and table-high types, the latter providing additional working space in the farm kitchen. Each of the models can be obtained in single or twin-unit types—the latter having both vertical and horizontal immersion heating units that may be connected to the off-peak and regular circuits. Off-peak heating is a time switch which heats the water at other periods of the day when electric service is cheaper at lower rates. It is claimed that the water in the storage tank is quite sufficient to last throughout the heating unit will automatically turn on when the regular rate.

In average size heaters will deliver a capacity in a few minutes gallons of hot water drawn from a tank that basis, a 75-gallon heater amply large for the average farm. Prices range from and 160 gallon electric heaters are prices range from $ gallon of capacity.

Depending on the temperature and quantity of electric energy required, the cost of heating water may require from 150 to 800 kilowatt hours per month. At an average rate of 2½ cents per kilowatt hour, the cost this would be $6.00 per month, or a total of about $3.50. This is considerably less than either kerosene, gasoline or coal (except in a few instances where coal is definitely more economical and safer than electricity).

Succeeds in Turning Refuse Into Gold Mine

Four years ago an American named Berry Pink took the afternoon off from his work and strolled disconsolately through the city. He was fed up with his work, and was trying desperately to think of something new to do.

As he walked he noticed refuse, and idly stood and watched while they tipped the rubbish into a cart.

He was surprised to see how many dirty old milk bottles and fragments of broken glass tumbled into the cart, and although he soon resumed his walk, the germ of an idea had entered his head.

There must be some use to which all the wasted broken and used glass in America could be put. And then he remembered a game he had played in his youth, and, in a flash the idea came to him—marbles—that was the solution.

Now, Berry Pink was what the Americans call a go-getter. Once started on an idea he saw it through —and with a vengeance! In a short while he had established a factory and was busy buying up all the old bottles, cold-cream jars and bits of glass he could lay his hands on, and converting them all into marbles.

He also instituted a campaign to make America thoroughly "marble-conscious"—and he succeeded beyond his wildest dreams.

Today Berry Pink is known all over America as "The Marbles King," and, thanks to his efforts, more than 5,000,000 people in the U. S. play the game.

Cat Teaches Her Kittens Like Any Human Mother

A cat will play with her kittens like any human mother with her babies. She will teach them how to catch mice. She will teach them to take care of themselves when sick; to dig a feverish foot in cold water; to lie before a warm fire if they have a cold. And just as American Indians learned from the wolves that a sulphur spring cures rheumatism; from the bear that a red-clay bath will heal wounds; from deer that fresh ferns will cure fever; from dogs that "dog-grass" will make well a sick stomach; so Europeans first learned the virtues of catnip, or mint, from watching sick cats.

An old Fifteenth century herb-doctor wrote: "Cat-mint is of a sharp smell and pierceth into the head. It hath a hot taste, with a certaine bitterness. Nevertheless this pungent mint is a present help for them that are bursteen inwardly by means of some fall received from a very high place, and that are very much bruised, if the luyce is given with wine or meade."
